

ENL290 : Selected Topics in Literature

Selected Topics in Literature provides students the opportunity to read, discuss and write about a literary specialty. Subjects may include African-American literature, Nobel Prize winning literature, a literary genre, a single author, or a single major work. The course will include intensive reading, analysis of the literature and its influence on society, consideration of criticism of this literature, historical study of the author or authors involved, and discussion of the cultural context of the literature. Specific content will depend on the particular subject chosen for study.

Credits 3

Prerequisite Courses

ENL102: English Composition II

Semester Offered

Varies

Notes

Satisfied a Humanities & Fine Arts general education requirement. May be repeated once for credit.