

PSY219 : Psychology Of Women

This course is designed for both females and males wishing a broader understanding of the physiological, psychological, and sociological determinants of female growth and development. It concentrates on developmental issues and contemporary role expectations, conflicts, and the status of women within a culturally defined role throughout the life cycle.

Credits 3

Prerequisite Courses

PSY101: General Psychology

Semester Offered

Varies

Notes

Satisfies a Behavioral and Social Sciences general education requirement.