

ECO102 : Microeconomics

This course covers principles of microeconomics including functioning of competitive and non-competitive markets, price and wage theory, labor and agricultural economics, income distribution, and comparative economic systems.

Credits 3

Prerequisites

None

Semester Offered

Fall

Spring

Summer

Notes

Satisfies a Behavioral and Social Sciences or a Mathematics/Quantitative Reasoning general education requirement.