

BIO210 : Bird Biology

This is an introduction to the biology of birds and their behavior. Special emphasis is given to species of the United States and Massachusetts. A wide range of topics is presented, including field identification by sight and sound; taxonomy; breeding biology; foraging ecology; feather structure; flight; migration and orientation; anatomy and physiology. (3 class hours/3 laboratory hours per week).

Credits 4

Prerequisites

Grade of C or higher in BIO151: General Biology I or ENV118: Introduction to Environmental Science or permission of instructor.

Semester Offered

Varies

Notes

Satisfies a Natural or Physical Science general education requirement.